Market Review

October brought a sharp change in market leadership. Growing doubts over whether the enormous sums being spent on artificial intelligence (AI) infrastructure will generate adequate returns triggered a sell-off in technology and semiconductor shares, while renewed conflict in the Gulf pushed Brent crude above US$115 a barrel. Despite the energy shock, investors sought safety in high-quality government bonds, which rallied strongly after September's sharp sell-off. Central banks largely stood still, with the US Federal Reserve holding rates at 3.75% to 4.00%, and the European Central Bank and Bank of Japan also leaving policy unchanged.

Global shares (MSCI ACWI ex-Australia) fell 1.5% in hedged terms, while unhedged investors fared worse, losing 2.8% as currency movements added to the decline. The headline weakness concealed a broad rotation. Among developed markets, energy (+12.8%), consumer staples (+10.7%), health care (+9.9%) and utilities (+7.9%) led the way, while technology (-7.0%) and communication services (-13.5%) lagged. Value stocks gained 2.7%, whereas growth stocks fell 4.2%. In the US, the equal-weighted S&P 500 rose 5.0%, well ahead of the headline index (-0.9%), as large technology names including Alphabet (-18.7%), Meta (-15.2%), Nvidia (-10.4%) and Broadcom (-7.2%) weighed on returns. Global semiconductors slumped 13.7%, although software edged up 0.9%.

The UK was among the strongest major markets, with the FTSE All-Share up 1.1% thanks to its energy and defensive exposure, while MSCI Europe ex-UK gained 0.7%. European financials fell 5.4% amid fiscal and political concerns in France. Japan's Nikkei 225 dropped around 5% following a mid-month sell-off in semiconductor stocks. Emerging markets were hit hardest, falling 8.0%. Technology-heavy Korea (-15.6%) and Taiwan (-8.4%) sold off, Hong Kong's Hang Seng lost around 6%, China's CSI 300 posted an 11th consecutive weekly decline, its longest losing streak on record, and Brazilian equities slumped following the presidential election.

Australian shares bucked the global trend, with the S&P/ASX 300 Accumulation Index rising 1.1% and recovering part of September's losses.

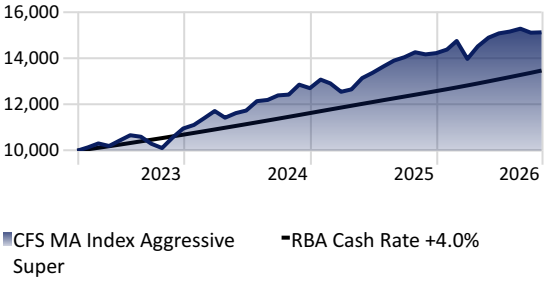

Real assets also performed well. Hedged global infrastructure surged 8.8% and hedged global property rose 2.6%. Gold retreated from record levels to trade below US$4,000 an ounce.

Government bonds rallied as yields retreated by roughly 0.20% to 0.30% across the US, UK, and Germany, with the US 10-year Treasury yield easing from 5.29% to around 5.03%. Australian bonds returned 1.2% and hedged global bonds gained 1.8%, while US Treasuries returned 2.4%. French bonds were the exception, as fiscal worries widened their yield spread over German Bunds. Global investment-grade credit rose 1.3% and global inflation-linked bonds gained 1.8%.

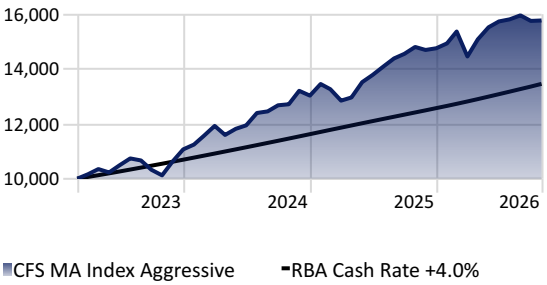

October underlined the value of diversification, with gains in defensive sectors, government bonds and infrastructure helping to offset steep falls in technology stocks and emerging markets.
