Market Review

Global investment markets opened 2026 with a constructive shift in sentiment, as improving risk appetite outweighed ongoing geopolitical and political uncertainty. January proved volatile, yet asset prices reflected growing confidence in global growth and corporate earnings. Hedged global Equities advanced approximately 2.5% over the month, while Bond markets delivered only modest returns as yields moved higher in response to stronger activity data and shifting policy expectations.

Equity market performance was characterised by a clear broadening in leadership. Investors continued to rotate away from highly concentrated US mega-cap technology exposure toward a wider set of regions and styles. Within the United States, small-capitalisation stocks rose around 5% in USD, significantly outperforming large caps, while the so-called Magnificent Seven stocks gained only about 1%, broadly in line with the S&P 500.

Outside the US, performance was even stronger. Emerging Market Equities surged approximately 9% in January, outperforming Developed markets by a margin not seen in more than two decades. Japanese equities also delivered solid gains, with the main Japanese Equities index rising 4.6%, supported by improving earnings expectations and renewed investor interest in cyclical sectors. Across regions, cyclical stocks outperformed defensives, reflecting confidence in global demand and earnings resilience. The Australian equity market was also up for the month (1.8%), driven higher by strong gains in the energy and materials sectors.

Earnings growth remained a key driver of equity returns. Forward earnings expectations were revised higher across several markets, particularly in emerging markets, Japan and materials-related sectors. In the US, the fourth-quarter reporting season progressed positively, with reported earnings exceeding consensus expectations by roughly 9%, providing fundamental support for equity prices despite elevated valuations.

Fixed income markets lagged risk assets. The Global Aggregate Bond Index rose by around 0.2%, as stronger-than-expected economic data and concerns around fiscal policy weighed on performance. US Treasury yields moved higher, particularly at the front end, as expectations for the next Federal Reserve rate cut were pushed further out. Japanese government bonds experienced a notable sell-off, with 10-year yields contributing to a monthly decline of approximately 1.3%, marking their weakest start to a year since the mid-1990s. In contrast, select eurozone bonds outperformed, with French and Italian government bonds returning around 1% and 0.7%, respectively, as investors sought carry amid easing political risk.

Commodities delivered some of the strongest returns during the month. The Bloomberg Commodity Index rose approximately 10%, led by energy markets. Brent crude oil prices climbed around 12%, while European and US gas prices surged on colder-than-expected winter conditions. Gold also performed strongly, rising around 13% during January, supported by central bank demand and heightened geopolitical risk.

Overall, January highlighted a more balanced market environment. Equity gains broadened across regions and styles, commodities delivered strong returns, and diversification proved valuable.

The Morningstar Historical Corporate Sustainability Score is a weighted average of the trailing 12 months of Morningstar Portfolio Corporate Sustainability Scores. Historical portfolio scores are not equal-weighted; rather, more-recent portfolios are weighted more heavily than older portfolios. Combining the trailing 12 months of portfolio scores adds consistency while still reflecting portfolio managers' current decisions by weighting the most recent portfolio scores more heavily.

ESG pillar scores are displayed as a number between 0 and 50 with most scores range between 0 and 25. It is the asset-weighted average of the company environmental, social, governance risk scores for the covered corporate holdings in a portfolio. The scores measure the degree to which a company's economic value may be at risk driven by environmental, social, and governance factors. The risk represents the unmanaged risk exposure after taking into account a company's management of such risks.
